LAW AND ORDER

Daily and hourly the situation brought on by the strike of railway men at and about Buffalo grows more serious. Great numbers of men are engaged in the affair. one way and another: mammoth interests are involved : perplexing complications are presented.

To the pressuce of a strong military force is attributed the fact that actual scenes of violence and destruction have seased at the centre of the strike operations. A still greater force of soldiers will have been concentrated there before the day is over, and property will be still more securely guarded Thinking people will realize that in thus mobilizing an army at the of trouble the howing its consideration for all its people, whether on one side of the dispute or the other. It sends soldiers to protect threatened property. But it sends them in such overwhelming array that they may do their work bloodlessly, by weight of numbers and discipline.

Law and order must be preserved, and it is the intention of the State Executive to preserve it under all circumstances. Organized labor would do well to assist.

Treated with Tobacco Emoke. A late curiosity in photography, says the Scientific American, is a photograph that is developed by tobacco smoke. Nothing is seen on the paper, previously prepared, until it is held in the smoke, when the picture gradually comes out in strong black and white.

The process of preparation is very simple. It consists in preparing a small When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. TROLLEY DECISION DELAYED.

When the Aldermen meet next Tuesday cir Raifroad Gommittee will not be said that, since the trolley matter. So hat question will not be settled at that meeting. It might be said that, since the trolley is not yet here, the city is still cafe. But that is not true.

What is needed is a prompt refusal of the properties of aminonia, succeeds very well, as we overhead-wise section of the properties of aminonia, succeeds very well, as we have above noted, and colors the chagie photographs black.

When Baby was sick, we gave her Castoria. When she was a Child, she cried for Castoria. When she had Children, she gave them Castoria to the photographs without gold. The bichloride of mercury changes the photograph partly into protochloride of protochloride of mercury (which is also white), and thus renders it invisible on the white paper. The image may afterward be made to appear by the action of hypochloride of sods or by that of aminonia all vapor.

Tobacco smoke, which contains vapors of aminonia, succeeds very well, as we have above noted, and colors the chagie photographs black.
